

Lonely 'Backyard Dogs' Helped by PETA!

Meet some of the dogs PETA has helped:

Blackie

Blackie was ankle-deep in mud and shivering from the cold when PETA staffers found her in a North Carolina backyard. So they worked with her guardians to make her more comfortable, giving her a sturdy doghouse and moving her to a grassy patch of land, where she was much happier—and drier!

Moyo

Handsome Moyo had only a piece of rotting, dilapidated wooden fence for shelter before PETA delivered a custom-built doghouse stuffed with straw bedding for him to curl up in. Now, he can finally stay dry during a storm.

Miss Feisty

Miss Feisty was overjoyed to say goodbye to the overturned trash can that was her only shelter and move into her sturdy PETA doghouse, which will give her some much-needed protection from the harsh winter weather.

King

PETA's straw-delivery volunteers got a thank-you cuddle after moving King to a dry patch of land and giving him his very own PETA doghouse during a cold winter storm.

Killer

The roof had fallen off Killer's crumbling shelter, so his guardians just replaced it with an old mattress, which obviously didn't provide adequate protection. So PETA gave him a sturdy, safe, warm doghouse along with a lightweight tie-out to replace his heavy chain.

Bear

Bear had nothing but a pile of garbage to huddle under for shelter until PETA gave him a new doghouse. He was so happy about his new digs that he even smiled for the camera!

Rascal

Rascal was tangled up in his chain and had only a crumbling junk pile for shelter when PETA fieldworkers found him. After they gave him a new doghouse and a tangle-free, lightweight tie-out, he was thrilled to have enough room to move around in and a safe place to sleep.

Lucky

Lucky's luck changed the day PETA's fieldworkers found him. Now, instead of spending his days watching life pass him by from within a filthy, ramshackle pen, he has a grassy area, a new doghouse, and a lightweight tie-out. When he realized that he could finally move around and feel the fresh grass beneath his feet, he jumped for joy!

Baby

Baby was finally freed from the junk-filled makeshift pen that she had been confined to 24 hours a day, seven days a week. She now has an uncluttered, safe space to walk around in, fresh grass to roll in, and a cozy place to curl up in at night.
